THIS SIDE OF PARADISE

Fitzgerald's first novel was published in 1920, taking its title from the Rupert Brooke poem Tiare Tahiti. The novel examines the society issues facing American youths in the aftermath of World War I. The protagonist Amory Blaine is a Princeton student who dabbles in literature. The novel sold out in three days, earning Fitzgerald overnight fame. On March 30, four days after publication and one day after selling out the first printing, Scott wired for Zelda, a young lady with whom he was infatuated and wanted to impress, to come to New York and get married that weekend. Barely a week after publication, Zelda and Scott married in New York on April 3, 1920. The novel went through 12 printings in 1920 and 1921, for a total of 49,075 copies.
